

I oppose the weakening of Indiana's law that would allow anyone having a business relationship with my bank, credit card company, long distance carrier, etc. to call me under the "established business relationship" exemption in Indiana. I am on the "Do Not Call" list because I do not wish to be bombarded with sales calls and the like for a reason and I don't believe it would be fair to me that just because I am required to give my phone number to have a credit card or bank account, that the business relationship I must have in order to live life would allow that same business to hand out my phone number to their business "constituents" so that these business partners can peddle their goods over the phone. I strongly believe if I want a service, I can search it out without having to resort to paying the additional monthly fee of caller id in order to avoid such calls.
